

Can something in your kitchen drawer really help cure diabetes?

You bet it can. Did you know there are an estimated 40 million used cellular phones in the United States totaling about two billion dollars in valuable technology? Most of these phones end up in the trash, which means that millions of dollars are being wasted each year.

There is a solution. The American Diabetes Association and Cellular Recycler have created a unique fundraising program. Together, we can raise more money in the fight against diabetes by collecting and recycling something you probably already have in a kitchen drawer - used cellular phones.

You can help - it's easy! Use the collection box to gather up your cell phones and collect more from friends and neighbors. Drop the filled box at your local UPS facility. Shipping is free! Every cellular phone you collect equals a donation to the American Diabetes Association.

Contact your local American Diabetes Association for details.
